Fall 2020

For OHA junior members and children of family members

SET YOUR SIGHTS ON A YOUTH BIRD HUNT!

Oregon's young hunters will get a chance to earn their wings this fall at youth upland bird hunts all across Oregon. Youth pheasant hunts will be offered around the state in September with shotgun skills clinics available at many of the hunt sites. Members of the Oregon Hunters Association will be on hand at many of these events, cooking food, taking kids afield with dogs, and assisting with the shotgun skills clinics.

Youngsters must have a Hunter Education Certificate, Harvest Information Program validation and a permit for the area they're hunting. Hunters age 12 or older also must have an Oregon juvenile hunting license and an upland bird hunting validation.

The bag limit is two pheasants per day. Kids who are hunting must be with an adult who is not allowed to hunt that day, and the adult can only supervise one young hunter at a time. See the dates for youth bird hunts near you on the next page, and reserve your spot now, because these hunts are very popular.

Kids will get an extra weekend for deer!

Oregon kids who have hunted hard in the western Oregon deer rifle season but have not tagged a deer by the end of the season will get one last shot this year.

Youths ages 12-17 who have not filled their western Oregon deer tags by the time the season ends on Friday, Nov. 6, may hunt the following two days in the youth western Oregon deer hunt weekend Nov. 7 and 8.

This special weekend hunt was started several years ago by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife to give kids a weekend to go afield and enjoy a fun weekend with their families without so many adults crowding the woods.

The hunt is open to kids with one of these tags that they have not filled: either a general season Western Oregon deer, or West High Cascade (119A).

The bag limit is one buck that has a visible antler.

WILDLIFE CLOSE-UP:

WOOD DUCKS

Many people think wood ducks are the prettiest of all ducks. They are colorful, medium-sized ducks, and they nest in trees, near water. They eat seeds, acorns, fruits, worms and bugs.

Wood ducks are the only North American ducks that regularly lay eggs twice in a year. Females lay 6-15 eggs in the spring.

The number of wood ducks dropped when the number of trees they could nest in also dropped. Biologists figured out that wood ducks are willing to nest in man-made boxes. Oregon Hunters Association members and other folks have been making and putting up nesting boxes where there aren't enough trees with large nesting cavities for more than 25 years.

OHA volunteers return each year before nesting season to clean out the boxes and put fresh nesting material in them.

OHA builds homes for Oregon ducks

OHA chapters build nesting boxes for ducks that only nest in trees, such as wood ducks and mergansers.

Wood ducks need trees to nest in. The Oregon Hunters Association is making sure ducks get what they need to build nests and hatch their eggs.

Wood ducks are pretty and colorful ducks. They and the fish-eating mergansers are among the very few American ducks that nest in tree cavities. These nesting habits make them special, and they have special needs. In areas where land use changes have led to a lower number of large trees and snags, tree-nesting ducks have had a tough time finding places to nest. Many years ago, when many older trees near water were cut down for lumber, wood duck numbers were very low.

But wildlife managers found out that ducks that nest in trees will also nest in man-made boxes. And, thanks in large part to OHA, duck nest boxes are in wide use near streams, ponds and wetlands.

OHA builds duck nesting boxes and places them next to lakes, ponds and streams. Every winter, volunteers gather to build and put up boxes so they are up and ready for ducks to nest in during the spring.

Wood ducks are one of our most common ducks now thanks to the efforts of groups like OHA.

Old nests have to be cleaned out each year. If boxes are kept fresh with nesting material, in the winter owls and other birds will use them.

If you know of a place near water where you think wood ducks or mergansers would nest, call your closest office of the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife and ask if they have any duck nesting boxes you can use.

Sign up for Hunter Education!

The time to sign up for Hunter Education courses is not when you want to hunt. Classes fill up fast, and it's hard to find a class right before hunting season.

Oregon's Hunter Education course is required for all first-time hunters under the age of 18.

10 Commandments of Shooting Safety

1. Control the direction of your firearm's muzzle. Carry your firearm safely, keeping the safety on until ready to shoot. Keep your finger off the trigger until ready to shoot.
2. Identify your target and what is beyond it. Know the identifying features of the game you hunt.
3. Treat every firearm as if it is loaded.
4. Be sure the barrel and action are clear of obstructions and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the firearm you are carrying.
5. Unload firearms when not in use. Leave actions open. Firearms should be cased and unloaded while in a vehicle traveling to and from shooting areas.
6. Never point a firearm at anything you do not want to shoot. Avoid all horseplay with a firearm.
7. Never climb or jump with a loaded firearm. Never pull a firearm toward you by the muzzle.
8. Never fire a bullet at a flat, hard surface or water. With targets, be sure your backstop is adequate.
9. Store guns and ammunition separately in locked spaces out of reach of children and careless adults.
10. Avoid alcoholic beverages and drugs before or during shooting.

Elk

Elk are tough and hardy animals that usually get through Oregon's winters just fine. They can get themselves into trouble, though, when they raid farmers' haystacks and wreck their pastures and fences. Sometimes hunting groups like OHA build fences and provide feed to lure the elk away from farmland and keep them out of trouble.
