Turkey Time!

Oregon kids will set their sights on taking a turkey this spring when the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife offers kids a head start with the yearly youth turkey weekend April 9 and 10.

Oregon will hold its youth turkey hunting weekend right before the regular turkey season opens on April 15. Youth weekend lets kids enjoy some uncrowded hunting in Oregon's great outdoors.

The chapters of the Oregon Hunters Association will help ODFW offer youth turkey clinics on April 2 at the White River Wildlife Area near The Dalles and Denman Wildlife Area near Medford, where kids and their families learn tips for turkey hunting.

At the clinics, kids get a chance to shoot a 20 gauge shotgun at a paper target that looks like a turkey. Lunch is included with the $10 entry fee. To cap off the event, there is a prize drawing.

The clinics fill up fast. For information, visit <https://myodfw.com/workshops-and-events>

Jacob Haley took this turkey during a spring hunt in southern Oregon.

You're invited to an OHA youth day!

OHA youth events offer activities ranging from archery to building bird houses.

Chapters of the Oregon Hunters Association will host youth field days for kids around the state this spring and summer. Most of the events are free, while some may charge a small amount to cover the costs of putting on the event. Many of the youth field days offer kids a chance to try outdoor activities and test their skills. Most of the events also offer food kids love to eat.

OHA chapters will kick off the slate of events with yearly youth turkey clinics on April 2 at the White River Wildlife Area and the Denman Wildlife Area near Medford. The clinics will get kids ready for youth turkey hunting weekend on April 9 and 10.

Youth field days will be hosted by OHA chapters around the state later in the spring and summer.

In September, OHA will help out at youth bird hunts around the state. You can stay up to date on youth events in your area by logging on to www.oregonhunters.org

APPLY FOR YOUR FALL BIG GAME TAGS BY MAY 15TH

Oregon offers some great youth-only hunts for big game.

Now is the time to start planning your fall big game hunts. The 2022 Oregon Big Game Regulations offer youth hunts for kids only, as well as guaranteed first-time tags in the general big game tag drawing. Also, in the Mentored Youth Hunter Program, kids who haven't yet passed Hunter Education can hunt under the close supervision of an adult. OHA helped raise the upper age limit for mentoring to 15.

Planned for 2022 fall seasons are eight youth buck deer hunts, 29 youth antlerless deer hunts 52 youth elk hunts, and four youth antelope hunts, including a Hart Mountain Refuge hunt. The deadline to apply is May 15.

In Oregon's "first-time hunter" program, which OHA helped create, a hunter under age 18 who is unsuccessful in the controlled hunt drawing for deer or elk tags may reapply for a controlled hunt having a minimum number of tags and be guaranteed a first-time tag. For information about Oregon's First-time hunter program and Oregon's Mentored Youth Hunter Program see the 2022 Oregon Big Game Regulations at MyODFW.com

WILDLIFE CLOSE-UP

Mule Deer

Mule deer live throughout the western United States, Canada and Mexico. In Oregon, mule deer live in eastern Oregon.

Mule deer are large deer. Their bodies are usually bigger than blacktails. Mule deer get their name from their ears, which are big, like a mule's. Those big ears, which they can move around like radar dishes, help them listen for dangerous predators like hunters, bears or cougars that might be coming near.

Male deer are called bucks, and they grow antlers that can get very large. A young buck, called a yearling, might only have a spike antler (one point) or a forked-horn (two points). But older bucks can grow huge antler racks. A female, called a doe, usually gives birth to twin fawns each spring.

Mule deer numbers have gone down in recent years. There are many reasons for this, but the biggest problems are that people are taking their habitat and there may be too many predators eating them.
